

NEW CHIEF EXECUTIVE BEGINS HIS ROLE FOR MYTIME ACTIVE

Jason Stanton begins his new role as CEO of Mytime Active this month, succeeding Marg Mayne.

Jason takes on the role having joined the company in 2015 to operate the Golf Division and rose to Operations Director in 2016. His extensive career in the golf and leisure industry has encompassed both private operators such as Parkwood Leisure, as well as charitable social enterprises such as Leisure Link and Local Authorities. His breadth of experience includes innovative research in health by establishing the benefits of GP referral schemes for Golf, and strong partnerships with Local Authorities.

Mark Oakley, the Chair of our Board of Trustees, said of the appointment:

"I am delighted that after an extensive recruitment process, involving trustees and staff alike, the Board has appointed Jason Stanton as our next CEO. Jason's knowledge of the wider leisure industry as well as his commitment to Mytime and our charitable objectives, made him the right person for the job."

Jason commented on his new position:

"It's both an honour and a privilege to be asked to be the new CEO of Mytime Active. Having worked for Mytime Active for over 6 years, I know the hard work and dedication that exists within our team. We are clearly operating in very challenging times, but Mytime Active has proved resilient throughout the crisis. I am confident we are emerging stronger than ever and will be fully prepared for the opportunities ahead".

NOTES TO EDITORS

For information and images please contact: Di Jones, diane.jones@mytimeactive.co.uk

Mytime Active is an independent social enterprise - its mission is to improve wellbeing through its range of more than 100 accessible services. These include golf, swimming, gyms, bowling, social and health programmes at 23 locations across Bromley, the Midlands and the South. It reinvests its profits in the long term wellbeing of the local communities it serves, and to date has helped hundreds of thousands of people to live a happier and healthier lifestyle.